

Documenting History: Your Words Matter

During an event like a pandemic, historians want to hear from people about their experiences. That could be letters, journal entries, vlogs, blogs, social media posts, photographs or objects that will tell people in the future about life during the pandemic.

Start journaling about the 2020 Coronavirus Pandemic. Make sure to start each journal entry with your name and when (if) you started quarantining or staying at home. Were activities you participated in interrupted during this time? Be as detailed as you can about information during this time.

No matter how you choose to create journal entries — digitally, in a notebook, with illustrations, on a blog — you can share it with the Greensboro History Museum. Contact us at 336-373-2610 or email museum@greensborohistory.org

GREENSBORO
HISTORY
MUSEUM

Smithsonian
Affiliate

greensborohistory.org/history-now

SAMPLE PROMPTS

My name is _____ . Today's date is _____ .

During the 2020 Coronavirus Pandemic to stay safe and keep others safe I have been

My day is different because

April is here and the weather is changing all over. Something that changed today was

I look forward to the future because